emilynoelle

Layering is always an essential fall styling trick, and Emilynoelle's breezily thin pieces are perfectly up to the task. Launched a year ago by Emily Kersman, 25, and Noelle Vazzano, 23, the collection features a pleasing blend of feminine, structured silhouettes and loose, flowy staples that were made to be mixed and matched. The duo was inspired by the vintage booths at the Rose Bowl and Fairfax flea markets, where they'd snap up separates from various eras and experiment with unexpected combinations. "We tried to make pieces that are overtly sexy on their own, but when put together become more playful and flirty." On our wish list is the cropped, electric blue jacket—an ideal pairing for any little black dress. Prices range from $88 to $297. Available at Hillary Rush (8222 W. Third St., 323-852-0088) and Brunette (8025 Sunset Blvd., 323-650-9018).

jools

Hawaiian-born designer Sybil Shimazu's jewelry possesses the kind of quiet elegance that adds polish to any outfit—but isn't overwhelming. Her Victorian lattice cuffs come in a rich gold and seem equally at home next to an evening dress or paired with jeans and a tee. Culver City-based Shimazu started the label five years ago and works with translucent, semiprecious stones, freshwater pearls, and delicate chains. "My work is very eclectic; some of my things have a vintage feel, some Asian, others Southwestern," she says. "I'm interested in traditional design motifs, but I try to put my own stamp on them." Perhaps most impressive of all are the affordable prices, which range from $20 to $150. Available at Jools.us.
